

CAREER IN OCCUPATIONAL MEDICINE

We are looking to recruit self-reliant, proactive leaders of tomorrow to train in a variety of posts, leading to careers in Occupational Medicine.

Successful candidates will be people-focused and excellent communicators with a desire to make a real difference to the health and wellbeing of people at work.

Training in a variety of settings, your skills in change management and diplomacy will complement your core clinical skills to develop health-promoting cultures and organisational wellbeing.

Nationally the high profile of health and wellbeing is stimulating a vibrant market for occupational health physicians.

Work-life balance matters in occupational health where jobs abound with family friendly working arrangements and generous remuneration packages in private or public sectors, salaried or in private practice.

Don't miss out on this great opportunity: Apply to be a part of an excellent training programme that will start you on the next stage of your career!
